

Thank you DiscoPosse Readers for 1 Million Views!

Nothing can express how grateful and humbled I am that my little writing project has turned into something that has become a daily read for many folks out on in the community. To paraphrase the Rifleman's Creed:

This is my blog. There are many like it, but this one is mine.

There are lots of blogs out there who have hit this milestone and far beyond, but it means a lot to me as it confirms that sharing through this means is valuable to some. This is what community is all about. Today a very exciting landmark has been crossed as DiscoPosse.com reached 1 Million recorded page views! I actually haven't had Google Analytics up 100% of the time, but it was still neat to see this in the window ☐

I don't have much more to say other than to say that this is only the beginning. A view highlights of the recent weeks include these:

- Helped to launch my company through a rebrand to Turbonomic
- Finished up Season 4 of Virtual Design Master
- Published 30 GC On-Demand Podcasts

There is also some very cool stuff about to happen at VMworld with my TechForward series, and much more that I can bring back to the blog once we come back from Las Vegas. If you are at the event, I will be in the Turbonomic booth quite a bit as I have some presentations during the week from Monday to Wednesday. My presentation schedule, including TechForward, is here.

It's a small milestone for many websites, but it was a big one for me.

Thank you for all that you do to help support all of my community efforts. I couldn't do it without you.
